compile-tool : it's another bat file. you have to build the binary rar password for all the country. Put them in the bin/release After installing, in the bin folder there are these folders : bin build compile keygen rarspell rarun release But there's no lib that could be used to build an exe or other dll. If you build a linux exe with the bin/release/rarspell, you have to build a tar.gz or something like that and then you would be able to start it. Today, you can add your vote to the ballot which will take place during the European Parliament elections, on 25 and 26 May. What should your vote be? Parliamentary elections are taking place on 25 and 26 May 2019 and at the moment the outcome is very unclear. The biggest parties are not even running a campaign, they are not putting forward ideas, they are relying on their record. They want to keep on governing as before and they are afraid of anything new. But there is a choice. You can support an “inclusionary” party such as the Greens, the Swedish Socialists, the Catalans or the Nordic Left Alliance which calls for a multi-party political system and an end to the two-party monopoly. Or you can vote for an “inclusive” party, like the French Socialists, the Spanish PP, or the German CDU, which support the mainstream right. But if you vote Green, you will be voting for a left party. If you vote Socialists, you will be voting for a social democratic party. If you vote CDU, you will be voting for the German Right. And if you vote for the Swedish Socialists, you will be voting for the Swedish Right. It is crucial that you vote for something different because the left party that wins is going to face the choice of either continuing as before or choosing a 82157476af
